EDITOR'S MESSAGE

Christmas is almost upon us and the turn of a new year! 2010, can it be possible? Hope that everyone has much to look forward to and that participating in one or more of GGLRC's activities is on your New Year' Resolution list. In this issue you will find a report on the Speciality by our hard working Show Chair, Terri Herigstad, a list of the winners from our Specialty weekend, Membership Renewal form, Annual Meeting announcement, Notice of Election of Officers and Board Members, and some Holiday Shopping information.

Melinda Grosch, Editor

ELECTIONS!!

We are having a somewhat out of sink year and the Nominating Committee has not completed a slate of candidates for Officers and Board Members yet. There are a number of people who have been willing to do various jobs but who will be doing what has not been determined. SO you will have to come to the Annual Meeting in January to find out all about it and place your votes for leadership in the next year.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Our President is at sea again so no message this time.

Allen Garfinkle, President

CAUGHT IN THE WEB

I got two e-mails on this. I figured I would include the text as well as the website. Editor.

"Can you help to spread the word that the Amanita phalloides, the death cap mushroom, has come out in full force since the rains started. We had one death at Lake 2 weekends ago, and PETS emergency clinic in Berkeley called on Friday and said they have had 3 deaths in 6 days - all from the Oakland area.

The mushrooms have a sweet odor (like honey) and are attractive to some dogs (whose owners report they actually seek them out to eat them). They are really non descript little white mushrooms.

The toxic effects appear about 6-36 hours after the mushrooms are eaten, and once signs are seen the toxicity is poorly responsive to treatment (we try a lot of things to support the animal, but if enough mushrooms were eaten it will be fatal despite the treatment).

If someone suspects their dog may have eaten a mushroom, the best treatment is to take the dog immediately to a vet or emergency clinic and have them induce vomiting and give activated charcoal. The mushroom toxin is absorbed fairly rapidly, but the damage to the liver can take hours before it is clinically apparent. Don't waste time trying to figure out if the mushroom is toxic as speed in removing the mushroom from the digestive system is the most important thing in my experience."

note from Shelley Ellison:

Hi all,
I just saw Mary Ann Herral in the obituaries of my Sunday paper. She passed away on October 5th at age 80. She was one of my sponsors when I joined, 5 years ago. I met her at a shown go, she was such a nice lady with her beautiful black dog Bart, and her husband Al. Is she still a member? I just thought I would mention it for the next newsletter?

I had fun at the show, see you all soon,

GOLDEN GATE LABRADOR RETRIEVER CLUB 2009
SPECIALTY REPORT

Our Specialty Show, Sweepstakes, Obedience and Rally Trials were held Friday and Saturday, October 16 & 17, 2009 at the Alameda County Fairgrounds in Pleasanton, CA. We had beautiful weather for a very relaxed and social event. Our entry was about the same as last year, which is still down considerably, I'm sure due to the poor economy.

Our judges were Arwyn Ellis, Dolwen Labradors, UK for the Breed Classes; Dan Clark, Everwood Labradors, for Sweepstakes; Dorin Ladd and Lora Cox for the Obedience and Rally Trials. They were all most gracious with their time in giving their opinions of our Labradors in the different venues.

I would like to thank all the people who helped to put on this quality event. If I start to list people individually, I'm sure I will forget someone so I'll leave it that I appreciate all the time and effort everyone put into our weekend. Our Club is known for its hospitality and our show reflects the work of a lot of people.

Unfortunately, we lost money this year. The Officers and Board have been brainstorming with ways to maintain the quality of our event without losing the special part of our specialty. Some ideas put forward have been to go to a one day show, two shows in two days, or continue with our current format. This decision has been somewhat made for us by the Del Valle Dog Club of Livermore with whom we are associated. They have decided to invite the Skyline Dog Fanciers of San Mateo County to join them on their show weekend. As it stands now, Skyline DF would host their shows that Thursday and Friday; specialties would be held Saturday; and Del Valle DC would host their shows Sunday and Monday. We can specify that the Labrador classes at either of the all breed shows be our specialty as well as our own event held separately on Saturday. We can also coordinate with Skyline and Del Valle to hire Labrador breeder judges at their shows. This would make for a circuit of 5 shows in one weekend. Quite an undertaking, and I don't know who can take that kind of time off for that many days of dog shows which could change the nature of our specialty.

If you have any thoughts on this topic, please feel free to contact any of the Officers or Board members. You can contact me at marstad@aol.com with any ideas you may have.

Congratulations to all the winners at our Specialty and the supported entries the following days. Complete results for our show are linked on our web site www.gglrc.org. I look forward to hearing any ideas for next year.

GOLDEN GATE KENNEL CLUB BENCHED SHOW

The Golden Gate Kennel Club is holding its 105th & 106th benched shows on Saturday & Sunday, January 30 & 31, 2010 at the Cow Palace in Daly City. Our Club has been given the opportunity to host a breed information table both days.

The table needs to be manned from 10 AM to 5 PM both days. We provide advice and written information, which the Club provides. This is a wonderful place for us to counteract the negative publicity given dog owners and breeders. The show attracts huge numbers of spectators and has many rare breeds on exhibit as well as being a great place to shop of all things doggie.

If you could spare a bit of your time to help it would be greatly appreciated. You don't need to commit your entire day, an hour or two would be a big help. Please contact Terri Herigstad [marstad@aol.com or 925-449-1684].

FIELD TRAINING DAYS AND WORKING CERTIFICATE TEST

From the Field: Good News/Bad News
Good News is the Jones Lake property will still be available for the club; Bad News is we will not be able to use for our Working Certificate test —no poppers or shooting on the property any longer. In the very least the test requires popper guns in the field, so we will have to set up our WVC test elsewhere. The other property we have used in the past, Ornbaun's in Fairfield is an actual duck club so that is closed to dog training during waterfowl season! Alas, our next training day and working certificate test will have to be pushed into 2010, which unfortunately is not as far away as it sounds!!!

This, of course, gives everyone ample opportunity to work on off leash obedience so everyone is ready to pass the test? Right?

Rules for the LRC, Inc.'s WC Test can be found on their website: www.thelabradorclub.com.

THE LABRADOR RETRIEVER IN NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

This booklet covers a variety of topics such as inherited diseases that Labradors are prone to, titles your dogs can earn from AKC, a brief overview of the Labrador in a "frequently asked questions" format, etc. Each club member gets one free (they must be picked-up at a meeting or event - contact Terri Herigstad or Allen Garfinkle). These make great little booklets to put into your puppy packets or to distribute to that prospective Labrador owner you have been talking with. ADVANTAGE FLEA PRODUCT ALERT

Dog stuck in crate highlights rare risk of spot-on flea treatment

October 7, 2009

By: Edie Lau For The VIN News Service

"VIN" is "Veterinary Information Network"

<http://news.vin.com/>

Got this through the Hangtown Kennel Club List via member Pam LaVallee who has this comment:

"Alcohol, in any form, is not a listed ingredient in Frontline plus but the safety precautions would lead me to suspect benzyl alcohol is present in Frontline also. I intend to check on that - but at any rate, it would seem safer to apply and give it time for any alcohols to evaporate, before crating your dogs!"

A veterinarian presented with a peculiar case of a poodle stuck in its crate last week traced the problem to the pet's spot-on flea treatment. Residue from the product Advantage, which was applied between the poodle's shoulders, somehow came in contact with the plastic base of the animal's crate, dissolving the plastic and causing it to adhere to the dog's belly. When the dog wouldn't come out of its crate the next morning, its concerned owner brought the dog, crate and all, to Dr. Tej Dhaliwal of North Town Veterinary Hospital in Ontario, Canada. Following two hours of sleuthing, Dhaliwal concluded that benzyl alcohol, an inactive ingredient in Advantage, was to blame.

Bayer Animal Health, maker of Advantage, acknowledged that the flea treatment was the likely culprit and offered to pay the owner's veterinary bill, compensate him for loss of salary and replace the crate, Dhaliwal said.

Bob Walker, a spokesman for Bayer in the United States, confirmed that Advantage contains benzyl alcohol, which reacts with certain plastics. He said he consulted with colleagues in veterinary services and was told, "We know it can happen, but we've never seen it."

Walker said a lead veterinarian in the department thought that most of the veterinary community was aware of the potential for the product to react with plastic. Walker said that he personally had not heard of such a thing before. He added, "My counsel would be, if you're not aware, you need to be aware."

The incident certainly surprised Dhaliwal, a practitioner for 13 years, who posted his experience in an online discussion board of the Veterinary Information Network (VIN). Some veterinarians said they were familiar with the potential for the product to damage plastic, but many were astonished by the news.

Dhaliwal said the owner of the dog, a 15-year-old poodle mix, had applied Advantage to the dog before bedtime. He speculated that the dog rolled over in the crate before the liquid pesticide dried. Presumably, residue of the product made contact with the plastic floor of the crate, causing the plastic to dissolve and "glue" the dog in place overnight.

Dhaliwal noted that the dog had been unable to eat, drink or relieve itself for 15 hours by the time he managed to free it with a tool normally used to scrape excess plaster from drywall.

The white dog had a patch of dark gray plastic about 6 inches by 4 inches stuck to its fur. Following the advice of representatives at Bayer, Dhaliwal said, he removed the remaining plastic using the contents of another two tubes of Advantage. Once freed, the dog was fine.

From the start, the dog's owner suspected that the Advantage was to blame, Dhaliwal said. The veterinarian figured some chemical was involved but wasn't sure what. At first, he applied regular alcohol to the plastic base, to no effect. Then he tried a tube of Advantage. The plastic liquified almost instantly, and his gloved hand stuck to the plastic.

Photographs snapped with his iPhone show a puddle of liquid across the bottom of the crate. Dhaliwal said one tube containing .5 cc of product covered half the crate base; he speculated that the plastic, as it dissolved, perpetuated the chemical reaction.

According to a Material Data Safety Sheet for benzyl alcohol posted at www.sciencelab.com, the compound "can extract and dissolve polystyrene plastic and may attack other plastics."

The chemical is in wide use, found in hundreds of cosmetic formulations including baby toiletries, mascaras, hair dyes and skin care products, according to the article "Benzyl Alcohol Allergy: Importance of Patch Testing Personal Products," published Feb. 15, 2006, in the journal Dermatitis.

Its function in topical preparations is as a preservative, solvent, anesthetic and/or to decrease viscosity, the article states.

Walker at Bayer said the company veterinarian he consulted speculated that benzyl alcohol is found in a variety of spot-on flea treatments besides Advantage. However, it's not possible to determine which products contain the compound by reading their labels, as manufacturers are not required to list inactive ingredients.

Dale Kemery, a spokesman for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), which regulates pesticides including spot-on pet parasiticides, said the agency is considering a new rule to require that manufacturers disclose pesticides' inert ingredients.

"This increased transparency will assist consumers and users of pesticides in making informed decisions and will better protect public health and the environment," Kemery said by e-mail. "The Agency anticipates publishing an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in the Federal Register within the next few months."

Kemery also encouraged anyone aware of adverse reactions with an EPA-registered product to report the matter to the manufacturer and directly to EPA.

"Manufacturers of pesticide products are required to report to EPA information they receive about potential adverse effects of their products, but reporting to the EPA directly is beneficial because the data we receive from the manufacturers is aggregated by severity category, and the report of an individual incident that we receive directly may provide more details initially that could lead to a follow-up by EPA with the manufacturer," Kemery said.

Walker said Bayer officials in Canada examined the lot of Advantage used on the dog to check whether it contained an abnormally high concentration of benzyl alcohol but found nothing unusual.

Dhaliwal complimented Bayer for taking responsibility right away. "Obviously, this is something of ongoing concern," he added.

He said he plans to write a report on the incident and submit it to a professional journal in hopes of spreading the word. "This is something that everyone needs to know," he said.
